WikiLeaks: Mission and Purpose

WikiLeaks operates with the core mission of promoting transparency and freedom of information by publishing leaked documents^[1]. The organization aims to challenge corrupt systems and empower individuals to make informed decisions^[1:1]. WikiLeaks believes that hidden information can be easily manipulated to serve the interests of the powerful^[1:2].

Key Objectives:

- Radical Transparency: WikiLeaks operates on the principle that information should be freely accessible to the public to promote accountability and justice^[1:3].
- Exposing Wrongdoing: The platform aims to uncover human rights abuses, expose political corruption, and shed light on covert operations^[1:4].
- Watchdog Role: WikiLeaks serves as a buttress against unaccountable and abusive power, holding governments, corporations, and organizations accountable for their actions^[1:5] ^[2].
- Protecting Sources: Designed to protect whistleblowers, journalists, and activists who have sensitive materials to communicate to the public^[2:1].

Assange's Perspective:

Julian Assange described WikiLeaks as part journalism, part advocacy, with the aim to achieve political reforms by releasing suppressed information to the public^[3]. He stated that WikiLeaks never censors and, to his knowledge, has never made a mistake^[3:1].
